2023 GOLF OUTING BENEFICIARY

The Challenge: Accessibility at Home for Individuals with Disabilities

Pennsylvania has a unique problem when it comes to housing for people with disabilities. The commonwealth is facing the combination of one of the highest percentages of people with disabilities living in the community and almost 80% of housing in the state built before the introduction of the Americans with Disabilities Act.

The reality is that many individuals with disabilities living independently do not have access to the home modifications necessary to accommodate their unique needs. Without these tools, many people with disabilities are finding it challenging to live independently at home. Inglis believes that solutions to this challenge depend on available financial resources, disability-competent providers, and access to assistive technology.

The Opportunity: Offering Increased Options to Promote Independence

As part of Inglis' continued investment to serving the broader disability community, Inglis recently launched a home modifications program through our Self-Determination Housing of PA program, a part of Inglis Community Services. For many, traditional funding sources for home modifications can be limiting. Our goal is to eliminate that barrier and provide possible solutions for all populations.

The new Inglis Independence at Home Fund, established last year, will enable more homes to be accessible by:

- Offering a non-traditional funding stream for more extensive home modifications for those with complex needs where traditional funding is not sufficient.
- Providing needed AT to increase accessibility in an existing home.
- Making the necessary repairs or improvements that eliminate barriers to independence in a home.

Please join us in elevating the options for people with disabilities that will enable them – and those who care for them – to achieve their goals and live life to the fullest.

THE IMPACT

Ann, a wheelchair user, was challenged navigating her own home. Her house has one 2nd floor bathroom and narrow doorways. Additionally, the home needed many repairs, which were not possible without financial assistance. These combined factors made it almost impossible for Ann to move freely throughout her home, and the lack of accessibility meant that she frequently crawled to get around.

Thanks to Inglis, we installed a stair glide system, handrails in the hallway and bathroom, and an accessible tub and shower in the existing bathroom. While these modifications were crucial, there is more that could help improve independence and quality of life for Ann, but they don't fit into traditional funding sources.

With additional funds from the Inglis Independence at Home Fund, Ann and many others with physical and mobility disabilities can live their lives to the fullest in their own homes.
